This section of the paper presents a summary of the key findings of the research.

In this section, make sure to:

- Report the main results for each main idea included in the paper (usually 2-3 ideas).
- Only specify the significant results that have been reached.
- Only provide graphs and figures for the major results.
- At the end of the section, include the following:
 - A brief description of key similarities and differences in the reported results.
 - A preliminary answer to which these results lead.
- Narrate this section in the past tense and passive voice

Basic Sample:
